Atomic Test Site, Nev. (AP) — A force of 1900 U.S. Marines prepared today to face an atomic blast while crouched in trenches 4000 yards from the detonation tower.

The shot is scheduled at 4:45 a.m. tomorrow on Yucca Flat.

When the ground quits shaking and the dust begins to settle, the Marines will leap from the trenches and move forward toward simulated objectives in what is termed a "vertical envelopment" attack.

Some of them will take off in 32 transport helicopters and fly to landing zones near the objectives. Twenty-four FOF Panther jet planes from the Mojave Marine air base will fly simulated cover mission.

Track vehicles moving from the trench area will employ the "ontos," a new antitank weapon. Four observation planes will cruise overhead.

Brig. Gen. Harvey C. Tschirgi, commanding the exercise, said the men are of the 4th Marine Corps Provisional Atomic Exercise Brigade.

'Expanded' B Of A Has Open House

More than 700 persons last night helped Bank of America's main office celebrate completion of its $133,000 modernization and expansion program, according to W. A. Muriale, bank manager.

Construction, which lasted six months, expanded the main floor to 7000 square feet and the mezzanine to 2400 square feet.

Much of the work was a result of the 1955 winter flood which so thoroughly played havoc with local businessmen and homes.

"However, a great deal of our work was aimed at the needs of Santa Cruz' growing economy," Muriale said.
