

The Triton Crew Prepares To Show

Capitola City Councilman Frank Layton, right, acting as the city's mayor pro tem, gives a hearty handshake to Al Parvin, one of the six men of the raft, "Triton." Layton represented the city yesterday morning as the raft began an unsuccessful drift to the Society Islands and possibly Australia. Capitola is helping to finance the trip by allocating $500 from the advertising and promotion fund to the Capitola Chamber of Commerce. The chamber turned the money over to the crew, who used it to purchase groceries and other supplies.

Crewmembers of the raft, "Triton," bustle about with duties as the 24-foot "Misfit," owned by Paul White of Capitola, begins to tow the homemade craft to the sea yesterday morning. The Misfit took the Triton some 10 miles into the ocean and cut it loose to begin a 7400-mile drift to the
