Learning at marine lab

Margaret Zimicki of the Long Marine Laboratory shares some of the wonders of marine life with a group of youngsters from Freedom Elementary School. The marine lab's touch tank is used for the display of local tidepool animals. Friends of Long Marine Lab is looking for volunteers to give guided tours of the facility. From Sept. 15 through Nov. 3, weekly classes will be given from 9 a.m. to noon. Natural history of the Monterey Bay, marine invertebrates, fish and plankton, marine mammals and birds are topics to be covered by UCSC researchers. No prior training is required. There is a $10 fee and scholarships are available. For further information and to reserve a place in a class call 429-2883.
