

Last call for Victor

Dan Coyro/Sentinel

SCOTTS VALLEY — An unidentified worker at Victor Technologies took one last call before the company closed its Scotts Valley office Saturday. The personal computer manufacturer, once one of the largest employers in this city, is moving its operations and its remaining employees — estimated at 40 — to Philadelphia, closer to its European markets. Competition, too-rapid expansion and other problems have been blamed for the company's slide. Seagate Technology will be leasing Victor's building on El Pueblo Drive, according to a security guard left to watch the empty structure.
