

An Informal Opening

An informal atmosphere ruled this morning during registration time at the third annual Congress for Community Progress at Cabrillo College. The congress, which drew more than 100 persons, concluded this afternoon with long-range recommendations for community improvement following panel discussions by experts in five separate fields—"Growth and Modernization of City and County Government," "Preservation of Natural Resources," "Impact of Educational Institutions," "Meeting the Area's Transportation Needs" and "Challenges to Retail Industry." In top photo are panelist Floyd Younger, assistant superintendent for instruction at Cabrillo; moderator Dr. Richard Fickel, county superintendent of schools; panelist Elmer Kirsch, director of instruction at Bethany College, all of whom were on the educational institutions panel.
