

Goodwill

Tre<sup>n</sup>'Sea Living

Work Can Be Beautiful

Work.

It's a beautiful word.

Life is full for those who have work to do, and at the Skills Center on 41st Avenue, handicapped workers enjoy busy days in useful employment. At top left, Wadie Hagens pats out the clay discs which are fired and fashioned into the attractive wind chimes which are selling well in area shops. At top right, Richard Howard presses designs into the clay, while Randy Zeyen, in the background, further prepares the discs for firing. Completed wind chimes are shown above.

James Moline, at left, carefully prepares a decorative piece while Sal Ferranti, at right, assembles plastic flowers to fill consignment orders. At lower left, Laurel deGrassi, Skills Center recreational therapist, watches while John Haskin works one of the new looms. Joe Nielson and Patricia Dodson, at lower right, perform one of the hand dances which Laurel taught them.

See inside for more about the center.

Photos by Bill Lovejoy

