

SAVING THE TREES

The original plans to cut down all of the stately New England elms located on the old Pope House grounds facing on Mission street, has been abandoned and a few of the trees will be spared. The trees with their immense spreading branches attract much attention in summer as well as provide plenty of necessary shade on hot days. All of the eucalyptus trees on the King street side are being cut down and made into cord wood.