

Nearly done

Photo by Bob Smith

Construction crews were driving the last few pilings on the Capitola wharf earlier this week as work on the $800,000 reconstruction of the century-old wharf nears completion. Decking and supports were being installed at the far end of the wharf this week, while carpenters, electricians and plumbers were installing handrails and utilities. Portions of the wharf could be open for public use in October, Capitola city officials said.

WATSONVILLE REGISTER-PAJARONIAN
September 4, 1981

REFERENCE