

A TIME TO STUDY . . .

In the informality of the Cowell College library, students spend a quiet afternoon in study, only steps from their residence halls and classrooms. At UCSC, living and learning are integrated in a total commitment to intellectual fulfillment.

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven.

-Ecclesiastes 3:1

A university should be a place of light, of liberty, and of learning.

-Disraeli (1873)

A TIME TO REFLECT . . .

In a mood of contemplation is Bernadette Weigand, a junior in French literature from San Jose, and one of the original band of pioneer scholars who helped open Cowell College in the fall of '65.

Of Time And The University

A TIME TO DINE . . .

Students at Stevenson College relax and dine on the terrace of their dining hall on a warm October evening.

A TIME TO REFRESH . . .

At mid-afternoon, two students enjoy a refreshing interlude in the cool waters of the Scott Fountain at Cowell College.

At the University of California at Santa Cruz the accent is on innovation in living as well as learning, with new patterns for the scholarly life, and, in the larger sense, for society.

In 1914, Woodrow Wilson said, "The use of a university is to make young men as unlike their fathers as possible."

Today, high on the hills overlooking Santa Cruz and the sea, almost 2000 students are forging new academic and cultural traditions. If one drives through the campus on an October day or walks through the quiet courts or strolls the terraces, he shares the excitement of experiment and discovery of students as they pursue the happiness of learning and the learning of happiness.

At UCSC, the air is scented with the fragrance of the forest and charged with the challenge of change.

A student's day at UCSC is many things, for the university life is a varied life. There are times for fun and for work, for spiritual, intellectual and physical nourishment, but without the regimen imposed by older traditions of classical university life, where the atmosphere was often both stilted and stuffy.

The UCSC life is the good life. These pictures tell why.

Text By Mel Baughman

Photos By Pete Amos

Sunday, October 22, 1967

Santa Cruz Sentinel -21

A TIME TO RELAX . . .

To read, to study, perchance to sleep and dream — ay, these are some of the pleasures offered to scholars at UCSC by the green lawns of a residence court as that evening sun goes down.