

Schwan Lake (left), although filled with wildlife and adding a unique beauty to Live Oak, is one of the coastal lagoons that have been so altered by man that they no longer exist in their natural states. Moran Lake (right) has become a stagnant pond of nearly all salt water. (Photos by The Sentinel's Pete Amos).