

Kevin Schultz is all business — nose injury notwithstanding.

Grey Bears Hold Harvest Festival

For the fourth time, the California Grey Bears' Harvest Festival brought together the young and old.

The fourth annual harvest festival was staged in summer-like warmth Saturday at Harvey West Park, as hundreds of senior citizens and young people joined in dancing, games and eating at the park.

California Grey Bears is the famous Santa Cruz organization whose food program is responsible for distributing free food to its members — now over 1800 strong. The group also sponsors several special events each year, including an annual Christmas Eve dinner and the harvest festival.

For Saturday's festival, Grey Bears served free barbecue dinners to everyone 60 and older, as well as bags of fruit, vegetables and dessert. And, not to worry, because there was plenty of liquid refreshment to wash it all down with.

The joy of sax at the Grey Bear's Harvest Festival.

While the sun shone, conversation flourished and food was consumed.

Kevin Schultz is all business — nose injury notwithstanding.

The joy of sax at the Grey Bear's Harvest Festival.

California Grey Bear is not an endangered species as witness this large crowd at Harvest Festival.

Elmer Newman, left, and Joe Pedulla, right, enjoyed the suds.

*Photos By
The Sentinel's
Bill Lovejoy*

C A'77

The best move
you'll ever make.

The best move
you'll ever make.

