

A Sunny Afternoon At A UC Regents' Meeting

UC Regent William Coblentz raises his hand high in the air in the doorway to the meeting room of Regents yesterday afternoon at UCSC. The students, who are trying to crash the gate at this door, failed here but half a dozen or so succeeded at another entrance.

A group of UCSC students march between residence halls at Merrill College on their way to Crown College where UC Regents were meeting yesterday.

yesterday as they heard speakers favoring a proposed Malcolm X college for UCSC and a university-wide table grape a UC Regents' decision last month to limit the number of lectures for student credit by outside speakers.

All was not protest yesterday at UCSC. After the Board of Regents' meeting adjourned, there was some cooperation in the meeting room.

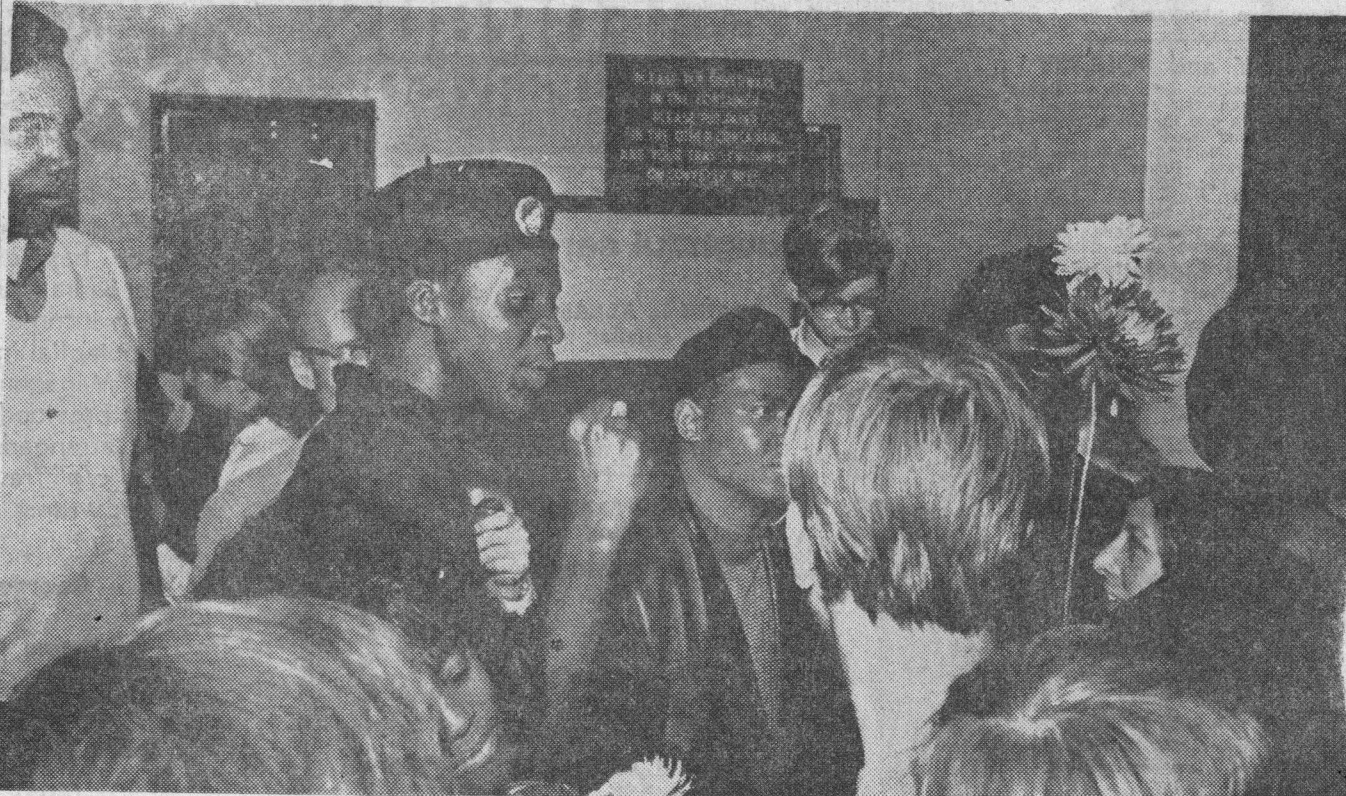

When you can't see from floor level, you rise to the occasion. These UCSC students get a better view of the Regents' meeting. Notice sign on floor.

Ho Nguyen, a Vietnam-born student at UCSC's Stevenson College, addresses students outside the meeting of the UC Board of Regents yesterday at the local university campus. Ho in the afternoon presented three petitions to Regents, that supported a proposed Malcolm X college at UCSC, that favored a boycott of California table grapes on university campuses, and that protested Regents' earlier action restricting the number of lectures by outside speakers.

Among those present at the UC Board of Regents' meeting yesterday were members of the Black Panther Party wearing their identifying berets.

Protesting students at UCSC donned various types of dress yesterday as they rallied outside the UC Regents' meeting being held at Crown College.