

Fine Lot of Pictures From the Airplane

A dollar a picture was what Preston Sawyer considered was well spent money when he went up in the airplane. He took his camera and got 10 shots from up in the air. They were taken from places where he got a wonderful perspective of the country below him. The street were all plainly outlined throughout the city and he secured snaps of the town. taken in sections.

The one of the beach with the Casino was especially fine, as was the one with the coast country, with the San Vicente mill and stretch of cliffs, with breaking waves below.

Garfield Park with its outline of circles and the Phelan eucalyptus grove was quite striking. Besides the ten mid-air pictures, he secured six taken of the plane at the landing field.
