

La Selva Tennis Court Money Delay

The La Selva Beach Recreation District will have to wait at least a week before it gets $4,048 in park dedication fees earmarked to help buy land for tennis courts in that area.

Supervisors Tuesday held over the allocation after hearing public testimony that there was resistance to the purchase of the land and that subsequent tax monies that would have to be spent on building the courts.

Bob Marks, a representative of the La Selvas for Sound Government group, told the board that the "taxpayers are against the tennis courts as proposed" and asked that the allocation be withheld until after the Nov. 2 tax election in the LSB Recreation District.

That election will decide if the district's resident will support a tax increase from 34 cents per $100 assessed valuation to about 53 cents, the board was told.

Roy Johnston of La Selva Beach pledged "The people in La Selva Beach will fight this all the way down" and asked the board not to allocate the money because "if you give it to the rec district, they'll spend it."

Supervisor Dale Dawson said he believed from past testimony there was "evidence people in the area want the tennis courts," but he agreed with the board to hold the item for one week in order to have testimony from a member of the LSB Recreation District.

The county park dedication fees are levied by a tax on the number of bedrooms in newly constructed homes and must be spent in the areas where the taxes are levied.

Transfer of the $4,048 was recommended by the County Parks Director Keith Kelly.

Other action of the board included the following:

— The board set a deadline of Jan. 1 for local government agencies to submit conflict-of-interest codes for their governing bodies. The board of supervisors' code was accepted by the state last week and supervisors are sending it to special districts and school district boards as a model they can use in developing their own codes.

— The board ordered that a small, unused, road in the Brookdale area be abandoned. The road—Alameda Avenue—had never been fully constructed and was designed to serve two parcels of land that have since been combined into one parcel.

— Klaus Kesselhut and Philip Bewley were given approval to move ahead with the construction of five medical-professional office buildings of about 1,290 square feet each on eight acres along the west side of Green Valley Road in the Freedom area.

— Stanley and Dorothy Kulp were given permission to expand a subdivision of 13 lots to 14 lots on property located on the northeast side of Vine Hill Road and Highway 17.

— Jiffy Food Store, 4901 Soquel Drive, was told to come back in one month with its appeal from the zoning administrator's denial of a request for a new sign at the store.
