Boost for the Cancer Society

Lockheed's Vern Smith looks over some of the American Cancer Society's material his company's $400 check will help support, while Jean Wolfson, chairwoman of the local society's fundraising committee, looks on. The society's goal this year is $100,000; $65,000 has been raised. Donations are used for services to local cancer patients and their families, and also to provide educational seminars and materials about cancer for local residents. A percentage breakdown of how the money is used is as follows: research, 34 percent; education, 25 percent; patient services, 19 percent; fund-raising, 13 percent, and management, 9 percent.
