Deer Park Barn Levelled

The 60-year-old barn at the new Deer Park Center was leveled Friday, although a facsimile of it will be erected about 12 feet from where the old one was located. The developers, Carl N. Swenson and Co., received permission from the county to level the barn because it was "not structurally sound," in the words of Henry Baker, director of the county's Community Resources Agency. Baker said the new structure would be made out of either the old lumber from the original barn or new material made to look old.
