Joseph LaCroix Dies At 62

Catholic graveside services will be conducted tomorrow at the Golden Gate National cemetery, San Bruno, at 11:15 a.m. for Joseph L. LaCroix, 62, who died yesterday after a long illness.

Friends may call at White's mortuary until 9 o'clock this evening.

A native of Wyandotte, Mich., LaCroix came to Santa Cruz from Mariposa where he was a rancher for nearly 20 years.

He is survived by his wife, Ce-

One of the first areas in Santa Cruz normally to be affected by high water in the San Lorenzo river is the lower Broadway sector. In the top picture, flood waters have surrounded the Burch home at 100 Broadway. In the middle photo is the Lower Broadway apartments with the ironical sign stating "Please Do Not Block Driveway," a request that muddy water failed to heed. The lower picture shows flood waters surging into the Riverbank trailer court at the Water street bridge.

Richard Gai

Looking north from the Cooper street footbridge, the flood waters are visible seeping down Burnett street. The Garfield street approach to the footbridge was already under water as the city's gauge reached 11 feet about 11 a.m. By noon it was down to 10.5. The middle photo shows little Branciforte creek raging under the Ocean street bridge. In the lower photo are two marooned cars at the foot of Broadway.
