The Future

If we could see before us,
(As we can look behind)
And open wide the book of life,
I wonder what we'd find?

If we could turn the pages
And glance at every one,
And see the things we're going to do
Beside the things we've done,

If we could see the happiness,
If we could see the pain,
And know that THIS was what we'd be,
We'd close the book again.

Who wants to know the future
With all its stress and strife?
There'd be no use in living
If we knew the all of life.

—Vivian Rostron, 1931
