A lot of faces looked upward as Boulder Creek's new library opened today, for it was a banner day. Fifth and sixth grade students from Boulder Creek Elementary School and the Cultural Council combined their creative juices to produce theme banners based on favorite books. The banners will hang in the children's section. Teacher Kay Tamagni and Marion Dansky, an artist from SPECTRA, the arts-in-the-schools program, coordinated the effort.

Work well done deserves admiration, and Boulder Creek banner-makers are proud of their art that hangs in the new community library. At far left, left to right, are Shannon Haentjens, Tanya Kaminar, Jacob Heywood and Ryan Thomas. At left, Asher Rios and Anicka Mihalik in a pensive moment.
