

Slide, Mac, Slide

Hula-Hoops are out.

Skate boards are on the way out.

What is taking up the vacuum?

Mac Slides.

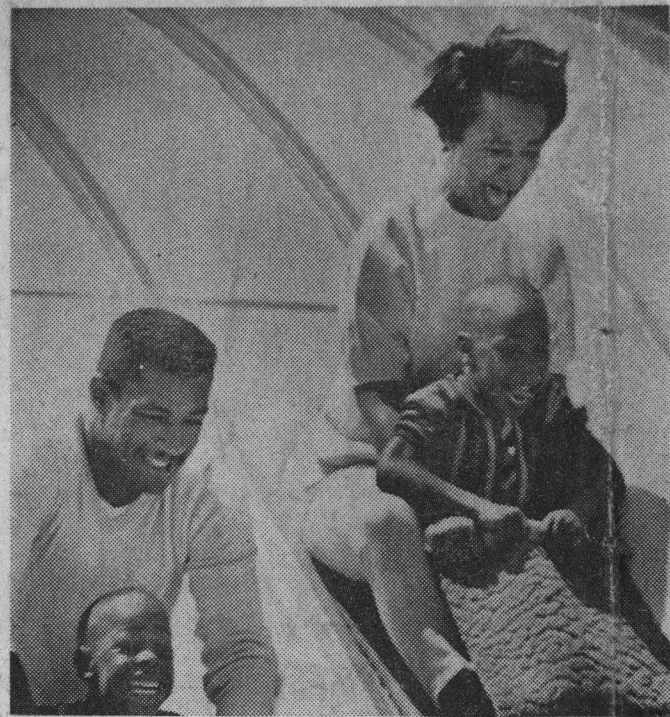

The latest mania to hit the U.S. is a 32-foot high, 163-foot long slide on which riders attain speeds up to 32 miles per hour over three thrilling drops.

The craze is spreading out from Southern California, where most of the modern fads and fancies seem to originate these days.

Santa Cruz' Mac Slide on Beach Street opened July 4, and since then some 50,000 fun-seekers have taken the short but speedy trip down one of the 12 sliding lanes, according to Manager John Grenek.
