

UCSC's Spring Thing--Lots Of Fun, And All Heart

Pacific avenue was full of clowns, floats and bands yesterday as the first UCSC Spring Thing parade went down the street. The little girl is Lauren Keesing, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Keesing of Santa Cruz. The parade drew attention to the Spring Thing activities which began Thursday and ran through today. The aim of the Spring Thing is to raise money for the UCSC tutorial project designed to "provide remedial tutoring and cultural enrichment for children coming from economically disadvantaged families in the Santa Cruz area."

Children with gigantic flowers and a wishing well on a green platform made up one of the floats in UCSC's Spring Thing parade on Pacific avenue yesterday. You've heard about body english? Now, how about body art? Spring Thing revelers at UCSC daubed paint over their bodies and squirmed around on canvases to create some way out surrealism. From left in foreground are Dave Sanford, sophomore; Terry Dahlgren, freshman, and Jerri Kleber, sophomore, all of Stevenson college.

Ooey, goopy egg drips from the fingers of Arleen Fidler, a sophomore at Stevenson College, as she loses in the Spring Thing egg throwing contest, below. Contestants started out a few paces apart and stepped backward one pace with each successful toss. Arleen's egg broke at 29 paces. Winners Larry Wagner and Joe Reynolds, both of the Stevenson "Animal Farm" residence, made their last successful toss at 41 paces.
