SANTA CRUZ STYLE LINES

The best things we've heard all week from the people who write for us and the people we write about.

Claudia Sternbach figuring out local fashion:

"This is Santa Cruz. There are no fashion rules. This is one reason why many of us live here. Because nobody would glance twice at Cinderella mailing a package. Or at a princess sipping soup at the Spoon."

Terry Brejla in his Answer Man column, responding to a question about why he commutes over the hill every day:

"No, I'm not nuts; and if I had a dollar for every time someone asked me that question, I'd be a rich man and wouldn't have to work over the hill.

From the Rev. Mark Stetz, new pastor at Holy Cross Church in Santa Cruz:

"It was not something I had considered. I believed very much in developing my relationship with God, and living that in community. But being a priest? Oh, that was just too weird."

Secrets of the jelly bean:

"2 lemon beans and 2 coconut beans make lemon meringue pie."

Watsonville surfer Barry Wallace on why he switched to skateboards at the age of 48:

"Those of you who have been paddling in local waters for the past 30 years know that surfing regularly becomes an increasingly difficult feat: juggling job and family, the mob scene when the waves are good, the dot-com longboard stigma. Sometimes, even the water seems colder."

June Smith, in Sunday's travel section, on
