on the assessment rolls, and appeals are referred to the county assessment appeals board.

“We can talk about the valuation placed on property, not the tax rate,” Seidlinger said.

He concluded, “The assessor’s responsibility is to place a fair market value on property and he can’t do anything else than recognize what the property has been selling for and the activity that has taken place. This is the tough part about being an assessor.”

Seidlinger said Live Oak is the major area of the some 80,000 parcels in the county which are receiving a high boost in appraisals for fiscal 1972-73.
